Notorious Gossip

The members of a village fishing club were quick to notice that since Brown had married he seemed disinclined to tell his many fishing experiences, which he used to demonstrate with his hands.

At a social gathering, one member asked Brown whether he had forgotten all about the yard and a-half trout he once landed.

"No," murmured Brown. "I remember. But I've given up telling fishing stories."

"Why?" asked another member, eager to solve the mystery.

"Well," explained Brown, gloomily, "every time I started to tell one at home my wife gave me some yarn to hold."

Club Reporter: "I'd like some advice, please, on how to run a newspaper."

Editor: "You've come to the wrong person, son. Ask one of my subscribers."

Slow Walter: "Here's your cocoa, sir: it's special from South America."

Customer: "Oh, so that's where you've been!"

Teacher, after a lesson on the prominent men of the day, asked the members of her class individually which of the persons she had mentioned they would like to see. Some said the Prime Minister, and on so, but one small boy shouted: "Please, miss, I'd rather see my father's boss!"

Teacher: "Why?"

Boy: "Because, teacher, father says he has over 200 hands."

Jess: "Miss Croonmore is going abroad to finish her musical education."

Tess: "Where did she get the money?"

Jess: "The neighbours all chipped in."

OIL REFINING PLANT

Italian Order For German Firm

(Hong Kong Daily Press' Special)

Rome, June 26.

The firm of "Aquila" Trieste, has instructed the German firm Borsig to construct an oil refining plant capable of dealing with 250,000 to 300,000 tons of crude oil per annum. The value of the order rests between 3,000,000 and 3,500,000 marks. The work will be carried out by Borsig and Zucker of Mannheim, on whose board are two important Italian industrialists.

The special importance of the order is that it was obtained against an Anglo-American monopoly in this field, and that this is the first large oil refining plant to be built abroad by Germany.

REORGANISING THE KING'S HOUSEHOLD

WRITTEN NOTICES
SENT TO ALL MEMBERS

London, June 7.

A big reorganisation of the staff of the Royal Household is in progress. To enable this reorganisation to be carried out thoroughly every member of the Royal Household has been given six months' formal notice.

Such action, "The Evening News" understands, is in accordance with precedent on the death of a Sovereign, so leaving the new King free to choose his own staff.

The notices have been sent in writing to each member of the Household, reminding them of the custom, and indicating that those be retained by the new King will be notified in due course.

It is the first occasion on which written notices have been issued.

EXPIRING IN JULY

Notices expire on July 20, and there are still various senior members of the Household who do not know yet whether or not they will be leaving the royal service on that date.

Among those who are leaving are: Lord Wigram, private secretary to King George since 1931, who has served Royal House for 28 years;

The Hon. Sir Derek Keppel, Master of the Household since 1913, who served King George for 43 years; and Colonel the Hon. Sir George Crichton, Comptroller of the Lord Chamberlain's Department since 1920.

Other changes in the Lord Chamberlain's Department include the retirement of Major C. L. Gordon, Assistant Comptroller, and Mr. Austin Hertslet, chief clerk.

It had been anticipated that senior officials would remain in the royal service until after the Coronation, but King has decided to make the changes on the expiration of the customary notice.

THE EARL OF CROMER

The Earl of Cromer, Lord Chamberlain, had asked to be relieved of his office on the grounds of health. He was abroad, convalescing after a serious illness, when King George died, and his duties then were undertaken by Sir George Crichton.

In view, however, of his wide experience of ceremonial affairs, the King has asked him to stay for a year at least, and Lord Cromer has agreed to undertake the strenuous duties which will fall to him in Coronation year.

The King has expressed no wish regarding an age limit, but those of his Household who are approaching the time when they would normally expect to retire have been asked to consider whether they would prefer to go now, so that continuity of service to King Edward may be retained without unnecessary changes later on.

This principle is being observed throughout the royal service, and a number of servants who have passed 60 years of age are leaving next month.

BRITAIN'S TRADE AGREEMENTS

MODIFICATIONS AND RENEWALS CONTEMPLATED

London, June 25. Negotiations to effect the modifications of certain trade agreements with foreign countries in order to prepare for changes contemplated in Britain's agricultural policy will shortly be undertaken. This was announced by Mr. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade in the House of Commons. He was asked whether it was his intention to give immediate notice of termination of all trade agreements, which could be terminated by the end of the current year by giving six months' notice. Replying, he said he presumed the question referred to the agreements affecting import facilities accorded in the United Kingdom to certain foreign agricultural and fishery products. The Government proposed to open negotiations with the countries concerned with a view to modifying these agreements. The primary object would be to render possible certain changes in the agricultural policy at the earliest practicable date. The Government intended to proceed with the negotiations as rapidly as possible, as soon as the necessary preparatory work could be completed. In the meantime, denunciation of the existing agreements would be premature and unnecessary.—British Wireless.

FRENCH NEWS OF THE DAY

FRANCE'S WOMEN MINISTERS

London, June 14. The appointment of a woman to the new French Ministry was confidently expected here, but the announcement that three women have been appointed has been greeted by women here with surprise as well as enthusiasm. The names of two of them are known far beyond their own country, but much less has been heard of the third, Mme. Suzanne Lacore, who has been a school teacher for thirty-seven years and a most useful member of the Socialist party for a long period. She is an idealist whose intense love for children will find ample scope in her work as Under Secretary of State for Child Welfare.

Mme. Léon Brunschweg, Under Secretary for Women and Orphans, is one of the founders of the French Women's Suffrage Union, and has been its president since 1924. She is also editor of the women's paper "La Francaise". Thirty years ago she began her public work in connection with the provision of children's homes. During the war she helped refugees from occupied areas, and started a training school for women inspectors of munition factories. Perhaps she is most interested in anything connected with women's work.

Mme. Brunschweg has always been one of the most interesting figures at the conferences she has attended of the International Alliance of Women for Equal Citizenship, for she is a handsome and extremely able woman, a good conversationalist, and a driving force on committees. Professor Brunschweg, her husband is a distinguished philosopher. She has been with him at many scientific conferences in other countries, and in her beautiful home in Paris she entertains many of his academic friends. Those who know her say that she should be a good administrator, for she is a woman who gets things done.

A DINNER TO MME. JOLIOT-CURIE

The third of the new women Ministers is Mme. Joliot-Curie, the Under Secretary for Scientific Research, who was, with her husband, the winner last year of the Nobel Prize for their discovery of artificially induced radio-activity. It was a happy coincidence that tonight, just after the announcement of her appointment, the Medical Association of the International Clinic should have given a dinner in London in her honour.

She herself was a quiet figure at this dinner, smiling but self-deprecating when Professor F. Hopwood described her discovery as one of those most important made in five years of "explosively rapid discoveries." But one heard to-night that her position in the Cabinet, though partly the result of a desire to pay her signal honour, will also entail much practical hard work in co-ordinating scientific research throughout France. Her department is completely new, so that she has, as one of her assistants aid to-night, to build up from zero.

In her own research she is now engaged on biological experiments with her newly discovered radioactive bodies with a view to applying the results to medicine. But until her Cabinet department is in working order she will have to suspend this research of her own.

YPRES HONOURS KIPLING

"Avenue Kipling" will soon be a feature of Ypres, the mayor and council of the town having decided to give the English writer's name to the avenue which forms the prolongation of the Avenue Maréchal French. The poet's widow, Mrs. Caroline Kipling, has sent Baron Cartier de Marchienne, the Belgian Ambassador, the following letter:—

Dear Excellency—I am honoured by the proposal of the burgomaster, aldermen, and corporation of the town of Ypres to name an avenue after my late husband, and I would be very glad if you would convey to the burgomaster that I accept his proposal. The approval of your country shown in this gesture of the burgomaster as forming another link in the friendship of the two nations would, I am sure, have given my husband infinite satisfaction.

ENGINEERING AND BUILDING

SCIENCE AND CIVILISATION

The Amenities Provided To-day

Although it is a common subject of comment that science and technical advance have changed the face of the world, it is not always easy to remember how recent are many of the discoveries on which present-day conveniences are based—conveniences which are now taken as a matter of course.

Many everyday amenities, now widespread throughout the world, are due to developments of physical science which have taken place in the lifetime of those still comparatively young. It is only forty years ago that Röntgen announced the discovery of X-rays, or that Ramsay extracted helium from the element, cleveite, or that argon was discovered, and yet these milestones in the history of science have led to worldwide broadcasting services, helium-filled airships, and the multi-coloured glare of city streets by night. It helps to adjust our values, and our estimates of the essential and the superficial, to remember how recent and new all these things are, and Sir Richard Gregory, by reminding us, in his Royal Institution discourse recently of what science has accomplished in the last forty years, not only greatly interested his hearers, but rendered a definite social service.

IMPORTANT STAGES

Sir Richard's address was entitled "Science in a Changing World; Recollections and Reflections." He began by telling his audience that his subject had been selected for him—he had been asked to deal with it—and it was a coincidence not a prearranged intention, that the date on which it was given fell within two days of the centenary of the birth of Sir Norman Lockyer and exactly, to the day, on the forty-third anniversary of his appointment as sub-editor of "Nature." In these circumstances he felt, and his audience clearly felt with him, that it would be appropriate to trace some of the important stages in the advance of science in the last forty years, as they had been recorded in the pages of that journal. During the editorship of Sir Norman Lockyer, and to an increasing extent during the thirty-nine years that Sir Richard has occupied the editorial chair, "Nature" has been in the happy position of being able, time after time, to publish the first announcement of discoveries of prime importance in the history of scientific achievement.

STRIKING EXAMPLES

One of two of these discoveries we have briefly referred to in our opening paragraph. It is not possible to follow in detail Sir Richard's account of their first announcements but some striking examples may be mentioned. It was in the issue of "Nature" for September 29, 1892 that Lord Rayleigh first directed attention to his experimental results which showed that nitrogen extracted from chemical compounds was about half of 1 per cent. lighter than atmospheric nitrogen. This observation led to the discovery of argon, which was dealt with in a joint paper by Lord Rayleigh and Sir William Ramsay, presented to the Royal Society on January 31, 1895. The day after the reading of this paper, Sir Henry Miers directed Ramsay's attention to Hillebrand's observations, made five years earlier, of the presence of what was believed to be nitrogen in the mineral cleveite. Ramsay investigated the matter and found a new gas, which he at first thought was krypton. He sent a sample to Sir William Crookes for spectroscopic examination, who announced that it was helium, up till that time not known on the earth, but which had been observed in solar prominences by Sir Norman Lockyer, twenty-seven years earlier. Again "Nature," in March of the same year, had the honour of publishing the first announcement of this romantic discovery of terrestrial helium.

THE FIRST TRANSLATION

Other examples of the service which the journal has rendered to science are the publication of the first English translation, on January 23, 1886, of Röntgen's paper announcing the discovery of X-rays, while the first suggestion that cathode ray, the basis of modern television, might be used for the transmission of vision was made by Mr. Campbell Swinton in a letter in "Nature" on June 18, 1908. It is of great interest that at that time, twenty-eight years ago, Mr. Campbell Swinton wrote: "So far as the receiving apparatus is concerned the moving cathode beam has only to be arranged to impinge on a sufficiently sensitive fluorescent screen, and given suitable variations in its intensity, to obtain the desired result." A further matter, to which Sir Richard Gregory referred with justifiable satisfaction was that at the time when the possibilities of mechanical flight were either disputed or theoretical grounds, or derided by practical men, "Nature" gave prominence to all Professor Langley's experiments on aerodynamics.

MINE CAGES MADE OF ALUMINIUM ALLOY

securing public subscriptions in The operation of a heavy pit cage not only involves unnecessary expenditure of power, but in a deep mine adds unnecessary stress to winding ropes already heavily loaded by their own weight. Attention has been given of late to the problem of decreasing the weight of the cage, without impairing its strength or capacity, and one solution arrived at by Messrs. Vickers-Armstrongs, Limited, Elswick Works, Newcastle-on-Tyne, in the construction of 3 four-deck cages, for Messrs. Daggafontein Mines, Limited, South Africa, has been to make these chiefly of Duralumin. These cages are each capable of carrying 80 men, or may be used for the transport of an equivalent weight of ore, or a combination of men and ore. Each has an overall height of 26 ft. 11 in., with a width of 4 ft. 8 in., and a depth from front to back of 5 ft. 11 in. over the doors. The weight per cage is 3½ tons.

The principal tension-supporting and lifting members are of mild-steel angle and channel sections, while the four decks are also of mild steel. The plates are supported on Duralumin angle and channel sections and the casing, doors, &c., are of Duralumin. The sides are 1/16 in. thick, with stiffeners where required. The decks are provided with 20-lb. rails to take ore trucks, and the doors are arranged to admit such trucks, each door being hinged and swinging inwards, so that the front and back are fully open when ore only is being carried, the doors are effectively secured in the open position. Each door is further divided vertically, so that one-half slides over the other, thus giving a narrow opening into a partially-enclosed space for the entry of men, the hinged half of the door being locked in position, and the sliding half forming the entry and exit. For a cage of these dimensions and capacity, it

RAILWAY EXPANSION

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

Holders of Chinese bonds and those who trade with China will find in the speech delivered by Mr. D. G. M. Bernard, the chairman of the British and Chinese Corporation, at a recent meeting, a well-balanced and not discouraging survey of the Chinese economic position. Because the country had allowed a number of loans to drift into default thereby closing the foreign money markets to any new Chinese issue, and its Budget to become chronically unbalanced, and because the country long suffered from the scourge of civil war and the menace of Communism, not to mention foreign ambitions, the impression here had grown that China's difficulties grew from year to year, and that the outlook was gloomy in the extreme. But Mr. Bernard's speech shows that the position in China is nothing like so desperate as has been suggested. The great floods last year involved 35,000,000 people, it is computed, but Mr. Bernard showed that in spite of the malignant forces in Nature and in man the Nanking Government had been successful in slowly but surely consolidating its position and extending the area within which the writ of its authority runs. The menace of Communism has been disposed of, civil war has ceased, and the hostility between the North and the South has been much reduced.

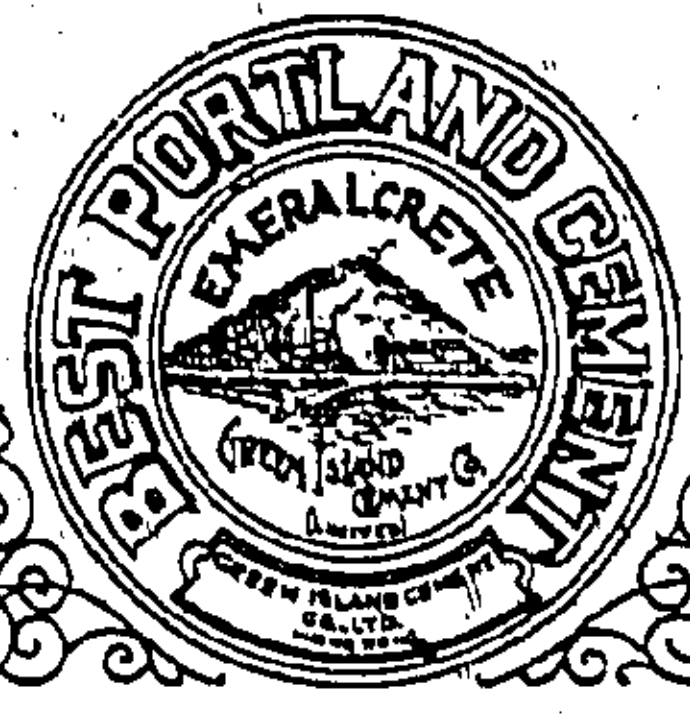

NEW RAILWAY PROJECTS

Moreover, the Central Government has shown itself capable of undertaking a constructive economic policy by arranging, among other things, for the construction of important railways, traversing some of the Central and Western provinces. Last year about 1,500 km. of railways were completed, and 2,500 km. of new construction are in hand. It had introduced a new chapter in Chinese finance by Shanghai to loans amounting to £2,600,000 for completion of the Hankow-Canton and the Shanghai-Hangchow-Ningbo Railways. Mr. Bernard said that the completion of the latter line marked a new departure, for it was the first Chinese railway loan to be offered to the public on its own merits without the adventitious support of any collateral security. China is also making progress in the settlement of loans in default. Mr. Bernard mentioned that Sir Frederick Leith-Ross's mission had already led to important results in this respect, and he mentioned specially the settlement of the arrears on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway loan. Mr. Bernard realizes that in order to facilitate a settlement of the defaults bondholders will have to make some concessions. Bondholders of experience will also realize the advantage of accepting a reasonable settlement of their claims over a prolongation of default, for the latter sometimes undermines the will of a debtor to pay. In the absence of a political crisis, the risk of which, however, cannot be ignored, the general economic situation in the country would hold good prospects for the future. The devaluation of the currency has already corrected the adverse balance of payments; the level of stabilization, as Mr. Bernard pointed out, appears to have been discreetly chosen; and the arrangement under which the Government of the United States has undertaken to provide China with supplies of foreign exchange for stabilization purposes should also promote stability of the currency.

would appear that a considerable reduction in weight has been effected by the partial employment of Duralumin, instead of making use of mild steel construction throughout.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LESSON SERMON

First Church Of Christ, Scientist

Subject: "Christian Science."

The subject of the Lesson Sermon in all churches of Christ, Scientist, to-morrow, June 28 will be: "Christian Science."

The Golden Text will be: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened." (Matthew 13:33).

Among others, the following citations from the Bible will be read: "And when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them. And he asked the scribes, What question ye with them? And one of the multitude answered and said, Master, I have brought unto thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit; And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child. And oftentimes it hath cast him into the fire, and into the water, to destroy him; but if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us. Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe, help thou mine unbelief. When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit; I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him. And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him; and he was as one dead; insomuch that many said, He is dead. But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose. And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out. And he said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting." (Mark 9:14, 16, 17, 21-25).

RESEARCH WORK AT SEA

Non-Magnetic Ship

WIDE RANGE OF SPECIAL INSTRUMENTS

(Special Air Mail Service)

Portsmouth, June 10.
The destruction by fire at Apia on November 29, 1929, of the Carnegie and nearly all her equipment put a stop to the organized work on magnetic research at sea carried out by the Carnegie Institution of Washington. Realizing the importance of the work to science and shipping, the Admiralty decided to take it up themselves, and for this purpose have arranged to build a special surveying vessel of entirely non-magnetic construction.

This vessel is to be called the Research and will be ready for service next year. Designed as a brigantine-rigged craft of 550 tons, she will have an auxiliary Diesel engine and will carry fuel to give a cruising radius of about 2,000 miles at six knots. She will have, including scientific staff and officers, a complement of 31. Her hull will be of teak, and fittings that in an ordinary ship are of iron or steel will be of brass, bronze, or some other non-magnetic alloy; in fact, only about 600 lb. of ferrous metal will be used in her whole construction. Designing a ship of this type was a problem to which various Admiralty departments had to give careful consideration, and they had the assistance of Mr. J. W. Peters, once commander of the Carnegie, whom the Carnegie Institution sent to London to help them.

COMPASS VARIATION

The work of the Research will be world-wide and will probably begin in the Southern Indian Ocean, where the Carnegie was to have gone but for her unhappy end. The programme mapped out for the new ship includes investigation of atmospheric electricity, determination of the earth's magnetism at sea, meteorology, deep-sea sounding by the latest Admiralty "pattern" deep-water echo-sounding machine, and, possibly, marine biology. For these purposes she is to be fitted with a wide range of special instruments which embody the latest results of scientific research. One of these instruments is a collimating compass for determining magnetic declination of compass variation at sea. In using this instrument one looks through one of four magnifying windows in the wall of the compass bowl and sees the nine degree divisions reflected from the corresponding concave mirror as though these divisions were on the horizon exactly magnetic north, south, east, or west, according to the scale used. Just as the navigator measures an altitude of the sun above the horizon with a sextant, so the observer measures with a sextant the angular distance of the sun from the middle division of a scale. If the sun is just rising or just setting the angular distance measured is the magnetic bearing counted from one of the cardinal points of the compass, and this magnetic bearing compared with the astronomical bearing gives the variation of the compass. If the observation is made after sunrise or before sunset the measured angle is reduced to a horizontal angle. At the same instant another observer measures the sun's altitude for this purpose. The principal advantage the collimating compass has over all other compasses in making observations of great precision is the continuous view it affords to the readings, which are ever-changing on account of the rolling, pitching, and yawing of the vessel.

MAGNETIC DENSITY

Another of the instruments is a deflector for determining magnetic density at sea. This is used to measure the strength of the earth's magnetic field in a horizontal plane—in other words, to determine the force that pulls or holds the compass card in its normal position with the north point towards the magnetic north. This is done by balancing the earth's horizontal field against another magnetic field for which a magnet of known strength is used. The deflector is a compass fitted with standards or stirrups, to hold the magnet of known strength at different distances above and below the deflector compass card. Suppose the ship is heading due north by compass, the deflector will then read zero. If one of the magnets is placed with its north end east in the uppermost stirrup, then the

2000 GUESTS AT ROYAL CALEDONIAN BALL

DUCHESS OF ATHOLL LEADS PROCESSION

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 14.
Society beauties danced centuries-old Scottish country dances and reels in Grosvenor House, Park Lane, London, last night. The occasion was Scotland's premier contribution to the events of the London season, the Royal Caledonian Ball, which has been held for 86 years under the direction of the Duke and Duchess of Atholl.

The most colourful event of the evening was a grand procession of performers in the set reels, the men dressed in magnificent uniforms and the women wearing the tartan sashes of their clans. The procession was led by the Duchess of Atholl and the pipers and drummers of the 2nd Battalion Scots Guards, under Pipe-Major Robertson.

The reels were "sixteensomes" and "eightsomes," danced by ladies and gentlemen of the Highland regiments, the Atholl Highlanders, and the London Scottish. The reels are danced by invitation only and nearly every famous Scottish family was represented among the dancers who filed across the room during the procession.

DUKE LEADS REELS

In the centre of the huge ballroom the Duke of Atholl and Lady Marjorie Stirling led the sixteen-somes of the Atholl Highlanders. Also in the centre of the room were the two Highland sixteen-somes reels led by the Master of Elphinstone and Lady Jean Ramsay, and Mr. Michael Brodie, Jr. of Brodie and the Hon. Jean Elphinstone.

Grouped around them were the eight-some reels of the Royal Scots, the Gordon Highlanders, the Black Watch, the Seaforth Highlanders, the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, the Cameron Highlanders, the Scottish Rifles, and the London Scottish.

Before the set reels the children of the Royal Caledonian Schools, Bushey (one of the charities in aid of which the ball is held), gave an exhibition of piping and dancing.

COLOURFUL SCENE

One of the most colourful features of the Royal Caledonian Ball are the dresses worn by the guests. The majority of the women wore long tartan sashes of fine silk caught at the shoulder by clan brooches. The beauty of the sweeping gowns was enhanced by lustrous jewels.

Men guests at the ball wore full-dress uniform, mess dress Highland, Court dress or hunt coats, or red facings on the collar and cuffs of plain evening dress. Fancy dress was not permitted, and the Royal Caledonian Ball is the only function of its kind where uniform may be worn.

Every third dance on the programme was a Scottish country dance such as Petronella, Scottish Reform, or the Duke of Perth. On gilt chairs on a raised dais at the end of the ballroom sat the patronesses of the ball, surrounded by a border of flowers. Over 2,000 people attended.

North end of this magnet repels the north end of the card and attracts the south end, while its south end repels the south end of the card and attracts the north, all operating to turn the card from north, or zero, reading to westward; the card will turn westward until the earth's field prevents further turning. It is then balanced by the earth's field and known field of the magnet, and the angle that it has been turned through away from its natural position is a measure of the earth's horizontal field. The relation of the angular measure thus obtained and the earth's actual field expressed in the usual centimetre-gram-second units is determined on land by comparisons with standard magnetic instruments.

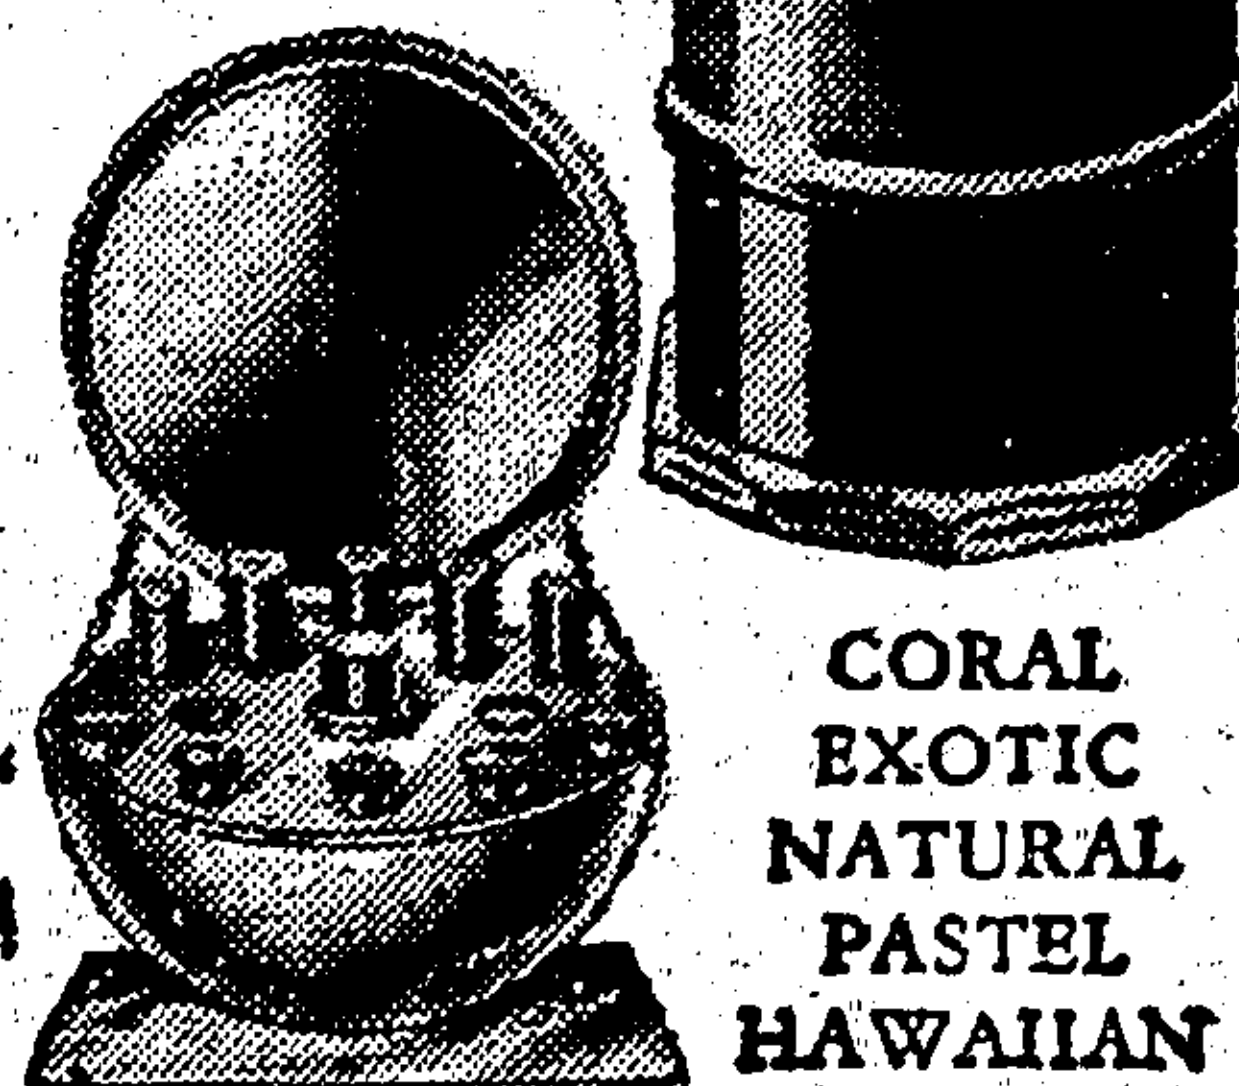

A third of the instruments is the marine earth-inductor for determining inclination at sea. This is used to measure the magnetic inclination or dip. It consists essentially of a coil that may be rotated at a constant speed, and will generate an electric current when connected with a galvanometer in the control house. If the axis of rotation of the coil be set in the magnetic meridian and inclined so as to coincide with the direction of the earth's field, the sensitive vertical circle of the instrument will give the angle of inclination or dip. In actual practice at sea it is not possible to make the axis of rotation coincide with the direction of the earth's field, but by reading first on one side, and then on the other the true direction may be computed from the relative magnitudes of the small currents.

THE STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR

AT THE QUEEN'S

In "The story of Louis Pasteur" now showing at the Queen's Theatre, Paul Muni is given a character role that is extremely difficult, yet he excels and shows quite definitely that he is one of the few actors in Hollywood who can claim to be able to hide his own identity in the character he is portraying.

The film attempts to authentically portray the life of Pasteur and opens with the physician leading a campaign against the danger of infection through negligence and carelessness of medical men. But being a chemist and not a fully fledged physician at the time, he is branded as a charlatan and retires to the provinces where he continues with his experiments and discovers a vaccine for anthrax.

His experiments with sheep that are vaccinated (and do not die) are interesting, and are one of the highlights of the film. Gradually Pasteur broadens the scope of his field and includes dogs in his experiments. The supreme test for his new discovery comes when he attempts to save the life of a boy bitten by a rabid dog.

The film appropriately enough, closes with his acclamation by the scientific leaders of the world. A large cast ably supports Muni, and includes Josephine Hutchinson as his wife, Donald Wood and Anita Louise provide the love interest.

Louis Pasteur, the man who has done a great deal for man-kind, his life and his trials, have been accurately portrayed, and the film has lost nothing for its historical accuracy.—"Redeem"

"LOVE ON A BET"

Gene Raymond conclusively proves his versatility in his latest characterization in "Love on a Bet," a romantic comedy-adventure showing at the Alhambra Theatre to-day.

Since he deserted the New York footlights for a picture career, Raymond has practically covered the range of emotions. One of his first portrayals to attract widespread attention was that of the condemned youth in "If I Had A Million," "Flying Down To Rio" and "Hokey for Love" attest to Raymond's skill in musicals, largely attributable to his ability as a pianist and singer.

Light romantic comedies of the non-musical variety prove his ability to portray romantic menaces. Such a role does he portray in "Love on a Bet," in which Wendy Barrie and Helen Broderick play the leading supporting roles.

Charlie Chaplin is let loose with a couple of wrenches in a huge modern steel factory in this hilarious scene from "Modern Times," the comedian's long-awaited new comedy, which comes to the Star Theatre to-day. The picture, which has been pronounced Charlie's greatest and funniest, is released through United Artists.

MODERN TIMES

"Modern Times," Charlie Chaplin's new comedy, which begins a 3 day engagement at the Star Theatre to-day, marks the nearest the comedian has ever come to letting his voice be heard on the screen. The scene, in which Charlie performs a hilarious pantomime to the music of "Tina," is the first sequence in a Chaplin film to be shot directly in sound.

Although no publicity had been given the novelty, the day after the scene was shot the rumour got about that Charlie had bowed to the "talkies" and sung a song in "Modern Times." This, of course, was not the case. What Charlie had done was simply to interpolate, in his own "musical language," "words" to fit the gestures, and the scene is said to be one of the comedy high points of the picture.

"Modern Times," which was written, produced and directed by Charlie Chaplin, who also wrote the music, presents the comedian in his same old lovable tramp characterization, but in a somewhat different setting. Gigantic factory sets and huge cafe scenes dwarf the pathetic, bewildered little figure, but through it all he wanders hopefully, battling the vicissitudes of life with the tragicomic fortitude that has endeared him to the world.

"Modern Times," which introduces Charlie's lovely new leading lady, Paulette Goddard, who has been pronounced "one of the genuine screen finds" of the decade, is released through United

DARK ANGEL

Fredric March, Merle Oberon and Herbert Marshall play the three lovers tossed helplessly about by the relentless tides of life in "The Dark Angel," the new Samuel Goldwyn production, showing at the King's Theatre to-day.

Set in a "lovely, quiet corner of rural England, the story, which Lillian Hellman and Mordaunt Sharrp adapted to the screen from a play by Guy Bolton, reflects the conflicts and triumphs in the life of Kitty Vane, a beautiful English girl who, since childhood, has been loved by one boy, Gerald Shannon, (Marshall), while she loves his cousin, Alan Trent, (March).

Months in the trenches bring to Alan the realization of his love for Kitty. Home on leave, he confesses his loves and they ecstatically arrange to marry on the morrow. An order cancelling all leaves shatters their dream, however, and they spend their last hours together trying to forget that they may never see each other again.

The story proceeds from this point to a powerful emotional climax and, after many vicissitudes, the lovers are reunited to face the future together.

highways leading from New York to Los Angeles, "Love on a Bet" presents Raymond as a debonaire hitch-hiker who pursues the girl of his dreams across the country, battling murderous escaped convicts as well as an objecting aunt in an effort to win the beautiful blonde.

CZECH DEFENCE MEASURE

Minority Issue Tension

"Hong Kong Daily Press" Special

Prague, June 25. As repercussions of the new Czechoslovakian National Defence Law in the neighbouring States whose national minorities will be most profoundly affected, are now making themselves felt in Prague itself, the Foreign Minister, Krafa, made a statement on Thursday before the Committee for Foreign Affairs of the Czechoslovakian House of Deputies, answering the public statements recently made by the Hungarian Foreign Minister, Kanya.

The cause of the present tension lies in that provision of the law declaring the strip of territory along all frontiers, 25km. wide, to be a differentiated zone within which only persons "politically reliable" are allowed to reside, and persons who own businesses, undertake building and exercise important economic functions such as banking.

It is feared that, as a great majority of the Sudeten Germans and Hungarians live in that stipulated zone the law might be misused to cause a wholesale dispossession of businesses and property, especially as the amount of indemnity payable is left to the discretion of the body of which Parliament has no control and against whose decision there is no appeal.

Kanya declared before the Hungarian Upper House recently that the Hungarian Government would defend the rights of the Hungarian Minority by a complaint to the League of Nations, should Czechoslovakia use the National Defence Law to violate the rights of this minority. Krafa declared in his reply that such assertions would not deviate the Czechoslovakian Government from taking the necessary steps for the Defence of the Realm as provided for by the new Defence Law. Czechoslovakia would, in fact, welcome a Hungarian complaint before the League of Nations because this would provide a favourable opportunity for comparing the respective situation of the minorities in both countries.—"Transocean News Service."

PLOT TO DUPE COUNTRY STOREKEEPERS

Charges Made In A False Coin
Case

VISIT TO TAIPO

Allegations that a man and a woman had gone to Taiipo from Wanchai to pass counterfeit coins because there was less likelihood of the country folk detecting them were made in the Criminal Court yesterday.

The allegations were contained in the opening address of the Assistant Crown Solicitor (Mr. M. J. Abbott) in prosecuting Leung Kwai-sui and Li Yin, a woman, on four charges of possessing and uttering counterfeit coins.

For the Crown case to succeed, said Mr. Abbott to the jury, it was necessary to prove guilty knowledge, and he submitted that the Crown could do that there were several significant facts regarding the shopping expedition the two accused had made to Taiipo Market on April 16.

The expedition was a scheme hatched to pass the counterfeit money, declared Mr. Abbott, for the couple lived at Wanchai as man and wife, went to Taiipo and purchased a variety of small articles at various stores.

A significant fact was that in no case did the purchases exceed two cents, except where the accused had bought food, and in that case two cents worth of food would be hardly sufficient to satisfy their hunger.

GUILTY BEHAVIOUR

"Another significant point is that at one shop both accused made two visits," declared Mr. Abbott. "On each visit they tendered a counterfeit coin for goods worth not more than two cents and received change. If they had been behaving innocently, why should not one or the other of them have made the four purchases at one time? Conduct like that is more consistent with guilt than with innocence."

Mr. Abbott contended that the small value of the purchases showed that the accused did not really want them, all they wanted to do was to rid themselves of the bad coins and get as much good money in change as possible.

When arrested, said Mr. Abbott, the man said the woman had given him the coins and the woman declared she did not know they were counterfeit.

Mr. Abbott said that although the man was charged with possession of eight counterfeit 10-cent, the Crown would not present evidence on that count. Pleas of not guilty were entered by the accused on all counts.

The following jury was empanelled: Messrs. W. C. Felslow (foreman), J. S. Smith, I. J. S. Glendinning, J. R. Canning, V. M. Barradas, Lei Tat-shi and K. W. Pedersen.

The jury returned a verdict of not guilty on the possession charge and a verdict of guilty on the uttering charges.

The Chief Justice (Sir Atholl MacGregor) imposed a sentence of a year with hard labour on each of the accused.

SALE OF HOUSE DISPUTE

Broker's Claim For Commission

IN SUMMARY COURT

The sale of a house in Kowloon Tong led to an action in the Summary Court before the acting Punsue Judge (Mr. Justice Hayden) yesterday.

Frank William White, of Arlington House, Mody Road, Kowloon, sought to recover $100 from Gordon States, of Kent Road, Kowloon Tong, claiming that the amount was due to him as commission in respect of the sale of a house in Kent Road, Kowloon Tong. Defendant pleaded not indebted.

Mr. F. X. d'Almada e Castro senior appeared for plaintiff and Mr. M. A. da Silva for defendant. Mr. d'Almada said that in April there was an agreement that plaintiff should act as broker in an endeavour to sell the house. He introduced a potential buyer to defendant but the buyer considered that the price was too high at $15,000.

UNEMPLOYED ON A SERIOUS CHARGE

PROCURING GIRL FOR PROSTITUTION

Allegations that an 18-year-old girl was seduced in Chatham Road and then hired out to Europeans, were made at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, when Lau Hun, 39, unemployed, stood before Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen charged with procuring Chan Yee Mui, of No. 12 Che Woo Street, for prostitution.

Inspector E. J. Ellis of the S.C.A. who prosecuted, said that the girl alleged she was a virgin before the accused seduced her.

An additional charge of harbouring was also levied against Lau. Accused strenuously denied both charges. "I have never seen this girl before," he said.

Inspector Ellis explained that the girl's parents were dead and that she lived with her grand parents. On the night of June 12 the girl absented herself and said that she wished to visit her sister in Tai Nam Street. While returning to her grand parents' house the next day, Lau came up and asked the girl to accompany him for a walk in Chatham Road, where he seduced and deflowered her. He then took her to Chung Lok Street where she remained.

On the 16th and again on the 17th the defendant was said to have introduced two Europeans to the girl.

THE ARREST

On the night of the 19th while returning home, Lau again approached her and attempted to entice her away. The girl's brother saw what transpired and had the accused arrested.

Evidence by the girl was given in hushed tones and with frequent long intervals. She said that when she accompanied the accused to Chatham Road, it was late at night. He took her to a "pavilion" in a garden where she was assaulted.

The case was held in camera. Following an awkward pause when the girl felt overcome with embarrassment, the Magistrate addressing her in kindly tone, said that although he sympathised with her, at the same time he had to insist in the interests of justice, that everything that took place must be given in her evidence.

NOT GUILTY

After lengthy evidence, Inspector Ellis said that the girl's tale differed in many respects to the statement she made to the S.C.A. Questioned by the Bench regarding her stay in Chung Lok Street, the girl admitted that she could leave the house whenever she wished. She was not forced to stay there.

Ruling that there was not sufficient evidence of procuring and harbouring, the Magistrate discharged the accused. There seemed to be some doubt on this point, and the accused was entitled to benefit by it.

ASSAULT CHARGE

European An Eye
Witness

A charge of assault was preferred against Chan Kit, 27, unemployed at the Central Court yesterday, the complainant being Lo Kam, a cook at No. 2, Tai Yuen Street.

Inspector A.E. Carey stated that at 3.30 p.m. on June 15 Mr. Bouchier, Supreme Court bailiff, had occasion to go to No. 2, Tai Yuen Street. As he was about to enter, the defendant came along and pushed past him and went into the kitchen. In the kitchen the defendant was seen by Mr. Bouchier to strike the complainant in the eye without the slightest provocation.

Mr. W.H.C. Bouchier then gave evidence, after which the complainant in the box denied a statement from the defendant that he (complainant) had attacked defendant on June 13 with a chopper.

The evidence of Lam Yau, a female on the premises was then taken, after which the defendant entered the box and gave his evidence.

Defendant was found guilty and ordered to pay $3 amends to the complainant and a fine of $15.

Later, following an advertisement in the newspaper, defendant effected a sale at $11,000 with the same buyer. Plaintiff's claim was for a 1 per cent commission. The hearing was adjourned to July 2.

Around the Courts

BANISHEE

Chan Kan Ho, 25, unemployed, appeared before Mr. J. H. B. Lee at the Central Court yesterday on a charge of returning from banishment. Defendant was banished for 10 years on August 28, 1928. Defendant was sentenced to nine months' hard labour.

ARMED ROBBERY

Wong Yee (44) unemployed appeared on remand before Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen yesterday charged with armed robbery with five others not in custody on board junk No. 2094K when Ng Yee, master of the Yee Kee shop, No. 44 Praya East was robbed of $270.

The men, one of whom was the accused, were alleged to have brandished revolvers and a rifle and boarded the junk whilst she was off Steep Island on March 11.

In addition to the above offence, Wong was also charged with possession of a rifle and a revolver without a licence.

The case was further remanded for a week.

ROBBERY RECALLED

A sequel to the daylight robbery which was perpetrated in Eastern Hospital Road on June 21, was heard in the Central Court yesterday before Mr. W. Schofield when Chan Tsol, 20, unemployed, was charged with the same. The complainant was Mrs. Al Ichi Kawa, who was robbed of a purse containing the sum of $3 and a gold hair ornament set with jade.

The case was remanded formally until Monday.

TRAFFIC SUMMONS

Two traffic summonses were taken out against Luk Wah, driver of car No. 178, before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Court yesterday. The charges were (a) failing to stop at 1.20 p.m. on June 9 when called upon by a Police officer and (b) soliciting for passengers.

Mr. F. I. Zimmern appeared for the defendant and pleaded not guilty to both charges, P. C. Campbell was for the prosecution.

The case was formally remanded for one week.

THE WRONG PARTY

SOLICITING FOR AN IMMORAL PURPOSE

The Rev. A. H. Bray was the complainant in a charge of soliciting for immoral purposes, which was preferred against Chung Chuen, 44, yesterday at the Central Court before Mr. J. H. B. Lee. The defendant pleaded "Not Guilty."

Sub-Inspector Mist stated that at about 3.40 p.m. on Thursday, Rev. Bray was walking along Queen's Road Central and when near the Central Market the defendant approached and asked if complainant would like a nice girl. Defendant was then arrested by the complainant and brought to the Police station.

Rev. Bray in evidence said that while on the way to the station the defendant had offered him $5 if he would allow him to escape.

The defendant said that he had offered to sell some medicine.

Sentence of three months was passed.

PLAN TO REDUCE CAPITAL

Hong Kong Currency To Shanghai

COURT'S APPROVAL

A petition for confirmation of the plan to reduce the capital from $10,000,000 (Hong Kong money) to $10,000,000 (national money) was brought by the Wing On Company (Shanghai) Ltd. before the Chief Justice (Sir Athol MacGregor) at the Supreme Court yesterday.

Appearing for the petitioning company, Mr. Hin-shing Lo, instructed by Mr. E. S. C. Brooks, said the application was not based on an alleged loss of capital. The reduction was purely a matter of conversion of the existing capital expressed in terms of Hong Kong dollars into Shanghai currency.

Full publicity in regard to the petition had been given and so far no notice of opposition had been received.

The Chief Justice granted the petition and directed that advertisements of the proceedings be inserted in newspapers. He also confirmed and approved of the special resolution and minutes set out in the petition.

Lady Caldecott has kindly consented to present the prizes.

CLICHES OF THE EDUCATED

"PLOUGHBOYS OFTEN TALK MORE SENSE"

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 14.
More good sense, in fewer words, was often heard from a ploughboy than from many a man, with a public school education, said Lt.-Col. Sir Arnold Wilson, M.P., to scholars of the City of London School yesterday.

"The ploughboy has thought things out for himself," said Sir Arnold. "The 'educated' man is, often, unconsciously, a mere echo."

"Make up your minds not to be mere echoes," he said. "The meaningless cliché, the inept slogan, the futile, worn-out adjective, betoken a vacant mind."

Sir Arnold was distributing the Beaufort and Mortimer prizes awarded for the encouragement of the study of the works of Shakespeare and for proficiency in the English language.

"If you would be worthy of this school," he said, "of this great undisciplined city, which is in the midst of a county governed, to-day, by a body of men who have refused, directly or indirectly, to co-operate with the Government for the defence of its inhabitants or the training of its citizens, you will do well not merely to recite Shakespeare, but to follow his counsel and play a man's part by joining the Territorial force or one branch of the armed forces."

ECONOMIC ADVISER

NO FURTHER STATEMENT MADE

Among the passengers who arrived here yesterday from the North by the P. & O. liner Rawalpindi were Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, economic adviser to the British Treasury, and Lady Leith-Ross, and Sir Frederick's private secretary. The party are on their way back to England after several months in China.

Sir Frederick when seen on board the steamer upon its arrival here yesterday declined to make any further statement than that released on his departure from Shanghai. "The statement is a very full one, and I am sorry but I cannot say anything further," commented Sir Frederick.

He did briefly explain, however, that his advice that the Chinese tariffs be reduced in the face of extensive smuggling in North China would have to be followed very carefully.

"You would have to reduce them with the smallest possible loss of revenue," said the adviser.

The party stayed at the Government House yesterday until the departure of the steamer to-day as guests of H. R. The Governor.

A PLEASING CONCERT

AT KOWLOON TONG CLUB

A delightful concert was given at the Kowloon Tong Club on Thursday night by the Choral Singers conducted by Professor E. Gualdi. The items were rendered in their pleasing and competent manner.

A new musical "And" in the person of Alec Greaves was offered to the audience. One of the most appreciated items of the evening was a duet "A la liza de la luna" rendered by this singer and the well-known Gus D'Aquino, Greaves has a most pleasant voice which harmonised very well with D'Aquino's.

Piano solos by Alison Mackenzie and Maple Quon were appreciated and did much to complete the enjoyable programme.

The Choral offerings were outpourings of tonal harmony. Especially fine was the singing of "Barcarolle" (Tales from Hoffmann). Miss Hyndman, the soloist of "Villia" (Merry Widow), sang well and rendered a distinctive touch to the appealing melody as sung by the Group.

Much credit is due to Professor Gualdi for the competence and charm of these singers. Their excellence of rendition, the beauty of their harmony and their impeccable selection of items are qualities of true artists.

EUROPEAN LADY BITTEN

TWO DOGS FIGHT IN NATHAN ROAD

A European lady, who attempted to stop two dogs from fighting, was bitten early yesterday morning. The animal was sent to Mau Tau Kok for observation, whilst the lady received treatment at the Military Hospital.

According to a police report, Mrs. Munroe, of No. 3 Sai Yeung Choi Street, first floor, was walking along Nathan Road at 6.15 a.m. yesterday. She was exercising a toy terrier dog, which was muzzled but not on leash.

Two Chinese ladies came in the opposite direction with an Alsatian dog on a lead. The animal was not muzzled. On seeing the terrier the larger animal broke away and attacked the terrier. Mrs. Munroe rushed to aid her dog, which had been seized by the Alsatian.

While attempting to separate the two animals, Mrs. Munroe received a bite from the Alsatian. A report was made to the police, and the Alsatian dog, belonging to Mr. Burgess of No. 799 Nathan Road, was sent for observation.

Mrs. Munroe in the meanwhile received treatment at the Military Hospital. Mrs. Munroe is a member of the Army Nursing Corps.

KOWLOON MOTOR ACCIDENTS

Woman Succumbs To Injuries

Two traffic accidents, one of which had fatal consequences, were reported to the Police yesterday. Both of the accidents concerned motor buses.

In the first of these accidents, Bus No. 558, was approaching the stopping place at the junction of Hamilton Street and Nathan Road, near the Kwong Wah Hospital, when Lo Sing, a female aged 57, in an endeavour to alight before the bus had come to a stop, fell and received severe injuries. This occurred about 11.30 a.m. and despite the nearness of the Kwong Wah Hospital, to which the woman was rushed, she succumbed to her injuries shortly after admission.

The deceased lived at No. 558, Nathan Road.

The second of the accidents involved Lieut. Minshull Ford, R.W.F. It was reported to the Police by Chan Yu, the driver of bus No. 812, that about 12.55 p.m. yesterday, he was turning his vehicle around a corner near the Shamshuipo Camp when private car No. 1617, coming towards the front of the bus, collided and tore the bumper from the chassis of the bus.

Car No. 1617 was being driven by Lieut. Ford and sustained only slight damage. Fortunately no-body was injured.

AUSTRALIA AND AIR MAILS

Talks between Ministers of the home and the Australian Governments on the subject of the new system of Empire air mails have now been in progress for more than a month. Although the discussions are reported to be proceeding satisfactorily, the several other partners in the project are still without an assurance that Australia will bear that share which will make the scheme possible. The delay tends to take the edge off the keenness of those who have already promised their assistance, and this, in the end may make it difficult to start the new services at the appointed time. What the Imperial Government had in mind when it put forward its proposals was to increase the frequency of services so that there should be nine departures weekly for Egypt, five for India, three for East Africa and Singapore, and two each for Australia and South Africa. It intended to justify this by increasing the mail loads sent by air and, to require in return from the carrying company increased operating speeds, so that the time of transit between London and Sydney should be only eight days. The method chosen to increase the aircraft loads was the general removal of surcharges for the carriage of mails by air within the Empire. That decision required a sacrifice of revenue by postal administrations throughout the Empire, and at the same time laid upon the carrying company the duty of equipping itself with aircraft capable both of higher speeds and of carrying the big loads which had been promised. The considerations of economy which led to the decision to obtain part of the improvement in speed by flying at night as well as by day, and to the further decision to use flying-boats as the safer craft for night flying, have been explained lately by the Managing Director of Imperial Airways. It may be doubted whether the Empire could get a service of this nature at a cheaper price or would be willing to pay the price which equivalent service by other means would entail.

Nevertheless it remains the fact that finance is the vital element in Australian doubts. The Australian Government embarked on its share of Empire air transport with the prospect of having to pay about £90,000 a year for it. The fees paid by the Australian public in sending letters by that service almost immediately covered that liability, and at the same time thrust upon the Government the duty of duplicating its service. The profits which had come unexpectedly from the a.r. mails had to be put back into the air mails, and the air route over the wild lands of the Northern Territory had its traffic doubled and its scattered inhabitants twice as well served. The proposals of the Home Government threatened to leave the Commonwealth Government with the route when most of the traffic should have been diverted from it by change to a flying-boat route from Darwin across the Gulf of Carpentaria and down the east coast of the continent to Sydney. The problem which has presented itself to the Commonwealth Government is, therefore, the land service across the "back blocks" has become a necessity to the inhabitants, especially in bad weather and will have to be continued, at least in part, with the help of a subsidy. The route is also of value as an item in the strategic link between the great cities of the south and the defensive base at Darwin. The cost of preserving this route will be additional to that of the new flying-boat service between Singapore and Sydney. As Dr. Earle Page, the Australian

JAPANESE OLYMPIC SWIMMERS

Arrival In Berlin

('Hong Kong Daily Press' Special) Berlin, June 26. The main body of the Japanese team of Olympic swimmers numbering 22 men under the leadership of the Los Angeles Olympic champion, Kiyokawa, arrived here on Friday morning having travelled from Tokyo via Siberia, Moscow and Warsaw without interrupting their journey. After the reception by the Olympic Committee, the visitors, who are expected at the coming Games to improve on their splendid form at the Los Angeles Games, proceeded to take up their quarters in the Olympic village.—Transoceanic News Service.

Minister of Commerce now in London, has already said, finance is at the bottom of the difficulty. That is an unfortunate fact, and the need to face it with a good grace arise out of the peculiar circumstances of the case. Not only has the scheme been planned as a whole; not only are estimates of cost and the Empire's promises to contribute to the cost based on this assumption; but the subsequent extension of the scheme depends partly on success in organising air transport as a unit for the Empire.

New Zealand will be served from Sydney and over the 1,200 miles of the Tasman Sea; flying-boats must be used for the present. New Zealand will hope also to be joined by British aircraft with Canada some time in the future, and again it must be the flying-boat which will maintain the service across the Pacific. New Zealand has already been contributing to the cost of the Empire air mail in its development period in the hope that the delay in extending it to Auckland might thereby be diminished. Like those other units of the Empire which lie on the Empire air routes, New Zealand is looking to Australia to accept the burden for the sake of the vision. Its breath of outlook is the feature of the scheme, which most urgently recommends it. It embraces the whole Empire, and it offers fast mail services to every inhabitant who can afford the ordinary postage. It leaves Australia, as it leaves Canada, South Africa, and India, to arrange its own internal services according to its needs and its resources. Great Britain herself is assisting home and European air mail services at some cost to her own exchequer. The project has received much public support in Australia and, if the Commonwealth Government ultimately agrees to bear its share, it will run small risk of criticism by Parliament or people. The choice before Australia seems quite clear cut. Without the removal of surcharge the estimated loads cannot be provided, and without the loads the improved services cannot be maintained. The price may be paid by the Australian Post Office in loss of revenue or by the Government in additional subsidy, a method which would be uneconomic because the loads would be small. The remaining alternative would be preferential treatment of Australia by the Imperial Government—a solution which the Independent Australian spirit would doubtless resent.

MONEY REFORMS PROVE SUCCESSFUL

Future Depends On Internal Stability And North China Settlement, Says Sir F. Leith-Ross

JAPANESE GOVERNMENT'S ASSURANCES

Impressions Of Mission In This Country Given By British Economic Expert

Shanghai, June 23. "When I return home I shall watch with closest sympathy the development of the situation here," said Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, Chief Economic Advisor to the British Government, in an interview yesterday evening at the Cathay Hotel to nearly sixty members of the foreign, Japanese, and Chinese press.

Sir Frederick sails for England to-day on board the s.s. Rawalpindi, and in the interview yesterday he first issued a statement outlining his impressions of his mission to China, and then answered a large number of questions concerning the statement and some of the results of his nine months' stay in the Far East.

He arrived in Shanghai on September 21, 1935, accompanied by Lady Leith-Ross, and was joined by Mr. E. Hall-Patch, of the Treasury, Mr. C. Rogers, of the Bank of England, and Miss N. Cracknell, his secretary. Mr. Hall-Patch will not be returning to England, Sir Frederick revealed yesterday, but is to be attached to the British Embassy as its financial adviser.

In his statement yesterday, Sir Frederick said:—"His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom sent me out to examine the financial and economic difficulties of China and the possibilities of our assisting her; in conjunction with the other Powers interested, to overcome these difficulties. I have spent nearly nine months here and have done my best to investigate conditions as I found them, without prejudice or preconceptions. A large part of my time has necessarily been spent in Shanghai but I have visited Nanking, Tientsin, Peiping, Hankow, Chungking, Amoy, and Canton, and have met representatives of the Government authorities and local banking and trading communities in all these centres. It has been the hope of my Government that the U.S.A., Japan and France would appoint experts to collaborate with me, but this did not prove possible. However, an important Economic Mission from the United States recently visited China and I have found their report of great interest. I have maintained contact with Japanese Government representatives and bankers here and have paid two visits to Tokyo so as to obtain first hand information of the views of the Japanese Government."

"The considered report on my mission will have to be presented in due course to my Government, but it may be useful, before I leave China, to give some outline of my impressions.

THE CURRENCY POSITION

"The first question to which my attention was directed was, naturally, the position of the currency. Silver has for many centuries been the currency of China, and the sudden and sharp rise in the value of silver during 1934 caused a similar rise in the exchange value of Chinese currency. Chinese produce became too dear in relation to world prices, exports fell off and silver had to be exported to meet the adverse balance of trade. This, in turn, caused a contraction of credit and an acute deflationary crisis: prices began to fall, debts could not be met and the banks became more and more frozen, particularly in Shanghai where the collapse of the real estate boom created a special problem. By October, 1934, the situation had become so serious that the Chinese Government imposed a variable export tax on the export of silver, thereby divorcing the Shanghai dollar from the free silver standard. But this measure, while it mitigated the extreme effects of the rise in silver, did nothing to remedy the difficulties which that rise had already caused; and when I reached Shanghai last September it was evident that further positive measures had to be evolved. China had abandoned silver, without adopting any alternative currency basis.

"I did not bring any cut and dried scheme out with me to put over the Chinese Government. There were several possible alternatives, and the decision between them, depending as it did largely on Chinese psychology, could only

INTEREST SHIFTS TO GENEVA

Delegates Gather For League Meetings

NEGUS TO DEMAND JUSTICE

Britain And France Agree On Attitude

London, June 26. Representatives of many countries reached Geneva this morning to attend the League meetings. Particular interest was displayed when the Emperor of Ethiopia arrived and a crowd of several thousands assembled at the station to express their sympathy and to cheer him.

The Council meets to-day for the first time since May 13. Its proceedings are expected to be shorn of much of their interest by the meeting of the League assembly convened for Tuesday.

The Council is expected to pass on to the latter body the task of considering the Italo-Ethiopian dispute for the Assembly will have as its sole item of discussion the "examination of the situation brought about by the annexation of Ethiopia and also of the situation in regard to sanctions enacted by the Assembly."

It is expected that representatives of the majority of the nations in assembly will desire to make statements.

"The British and French foreign ministers travelled by the same train from Paris to Geneva which they reached this morning."

After last night's talk at the British Embassy between Mr. Eden, M. Blum and M. Delbos, it was announced that complete agreement had been reached between Britain and France on the attitude to be adopted at the League meetings.

It was the first occasion Mr. Eden and M. Delbos had met, and they lunched together at Geneva to-day.

GENEVA ARRIVALS

Geneva, June 26. Emperor Haile Selassie, accompanied by Ras Kassa, arrived here on Friday morning by train from Paris and was received at the station by Ras Nasibu and the Abyssinian delegation to the League of Nations who reached Geneva on Thursday.

ITALIAN RESENTMENT

Rome, June 26. Italian political circles manifest considerable dissatisfaction with the Emperor Haile Selassie's journey to Geneva and resent his frequent assertion that he is assured of Britain's support.

Gazzetta del Popolo severely criticises Haile Selassie's recent declaration concerning his conversation with Mr. Eden. This declaration, says the paper, is in contradiction with the Foreign Secretary's statement in the House of Commons.

Conversations between Mr. Eden, M. Blum, M. Delbos and the British Ambassador at dinner last night at the British Embassy are understood to have been most cordial and satisfactory.

The Negus, interviewed, stated he was going to Geneva to claim justice and fair dealing for his country. Large crowds are waiting in Geneva for his arrival.

BRITISH SYMPATHY

London, June 26. Amid cries of "Good luck" and "God bless you," from a cheering crowd to which he responded with dignity, Emperor Haile Selassie, fugitive ruler of Ethiopia, departed from Victoria Station for Geneva to-day.

At the moment of his departure he conveyed his heartfelt thanks to the British people for their strikingly manifested sympathy.

The Ethiopian Legation, in a statement on the Emperor's interview with the British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, on June 23, mentions that the Emperor intimated his intention of vigorously protesting to Geneva against the raising of sanctions and urging stronger measures against Italy, an aggressor nation.

New Scheme To Be Prepared

It is understood that re-examination of Cable and Wireless Limited's position, foreshadowed on Wednesday in the statement announcing Mr. Denison-Pender's resignation as chairman, will be undertaken chiefly by the existing Imperial Communications Advisory Committee of which Sir Campbell Stuart is chairman.

As indicated in an official statement, the organisation established after the previous investigation in 1929 now requires further development and considerable work remains to be done, but it is anticipated that Sir Campbell Stuart with the new Cable and Wireless managing director, Mr. Wilshaw, and members of the Advisory Committee will be able to prepare a scheme acceptable to the Empire Governments without needing a special Committee of Inquiry.

IMPERIAL FLAG VENERATION

Peiping Incident Explained

Peiping, June 26. Extreme veneration of Japanese soldiers for the Imperial flag was the explanation offered by the Japanese military attaché for the incidents during the parade marking the presentation of new colours received from the Emperor on June 23.

"Where the flag goes they go—perhaps desperately," states the explanation.

However, the military attaché has promised to do his utmost to prevent a recurrence of such incidents.

This explanation was forthcoming in reply to American and French protests at the Japanese Embassy in Peiping against alleged rough treatment of their nationals who were watching the parade, bayonets being thrust against the people on the pavement.

TIN QUOTA INCREASE

Market Resorts To Heavy Selling

London, June 26.

The tin quota decision took the market aback and caused heavy selling which to-day is still unexhausted, prices sagging to the lowest level in nearly three years.

It is learned that the Committee experienced considerable difficulty in reaching agreement, Bolivia strongly opposing the increase in which, according to the "Financial Times" from Amsterdam, she was supported by Holland, but eventually yielded to Britain's insistence.

The increase releases about an extra 2,200 tons, but since May the statistics show the Bolivian exports to be 1,991 tons compared with 2,388 in April out of the quota of 3,293 tons and clearly the full amount will not be produced.

Bolivian labour difficulties are complicated, apart from the problem of rearmament of the demobilised military, by the fact that many conscripts compelled to labour in the mines during the Chaco war now refuse to work even for wages.

ONLY ALTERNATIVE

Although the world visible supplies at the end of May increased about 1,500 tons compared with April the next months are expected to decline about 500 tons. Therefore the British attitude is believed to be that raising the quota offered the only alternative for redistribution of Bolivia's arrears among other producers since stocks are still about 10,000 tons under normal, whereas consumption is about the level of production and increasing with expansion of the tin plate and motor industries in Britain and America.

The next meeting will be held on September 4.

BRITISH TROOP CASUALTIES

Second Death In Palestine

London, June 26.

The second death among British troops since the Palestine disorders began occurred yesterday when a corporal of the Seaforth Highlanders died from wounds received in a clash with Arabs near Akrahah in which two Arabs were also killed.

Four Arabs were killed in engagement with the Seaforths near Qubalah village southeast of Nablus. An armoured car patrol discovered about 50 marauders concealed on a hilltop 200 yards from the Jerusalem-Haifa road awaiting the daily convoy. An aeroplane sent a message to a wireless van in escort of the convoy and a detachment of Seaforths from Nablus skirmished up the hill with machine guns, dispersing and pursuing them.

A suitcase containing primitive bombs with a smoking fuse was discovered in a bus in Haifa. The driver extinguished the fuse and no damage was done.

Troops and police afterwards searched the adjacent hillside villages for arms.

DEMOCRATIC PARTY PROGRAMME

AIM TO CURB SUPREME COURT POWERS

AMENDMENTS IN CONSTITUTION

Philadelphia, June 26.

The powers of the Supreme Court will be curbed if the programme adopted at the Democratic convention comes into force. The party's platform foreshadows amendments in the constitution of the country if industrial, economic and other problems cannot be effectively solved under the existing constitution.

The platform makes no mention of the League of Nations, sanctions or the Hague Court. President Roosevelt will address the convention to-morrow.

Reuter's Bulletin Service.

Philadelphia, June 26.

Police were called to restore order at the evening meeting of the Democratic convention here when Roosevelt and Al Smith supporters came to blows.

Smith's henchmen were ejected after a lively first fight.

The Democratic Party's platform, described by Senator Robert Wagner, who is in charge of its drafting, as "the greatest Democratic platform ever presented to the people," was placed before the national convention later.

President Roosevelt, to whom it was telephoned at Washington, approved the platform, which contains no direct proposal for a constitutional amendment.

The platform declares that it is a self-evident truth that modern Government has three inescapable obligations to its citizens:

Firstly, protection of the family and the home;

Secondly, the establishment of a "democracy of opportunity";

Thirdly, to aid those overtaken by disaster.

FOREIGN POLICY

With regard to foreign policy, the platform manifesto advocates continuance of President Roosevelt's "good neighbour policy," reaffirmation of the Kellogg-Briand pact, maintenance of neutrality in the disputes of others.

It pledges the nation to work for peace, to take no profits from war and to guard against being drawn by political commitments, international banking or private trading into any war which may develop anywhere.

The foreign trade plank endorses Mr. Cordell Hull's reciprocal trade treaties and pledges continuance of protection to farmers and manufacturers against dumping.

The budget plank declares: "We are determined to reduce expenses of Government, to balance the budget and reduce the national debt at the earliest possible moment."

SOUND CURRENCY

The currency plank states: "We approve the objective of a permanently sound currency so stable."

used as to prevent the former wide fluctuations in value. There is no mention of gold, silver or War debts.

The civil service plank calls for immediate extension of the civil service principle to all non-policy-making positions in the federal service.

With regard to the constitution, the manifesto states the New Deal will seek "a clarifying amendment," if practice shows the problems of the country, such as drought, floods, minimum wages, maximum hours, child labour, working conditions in monopolistic and unfair business practices cannot be handled adequately by state and federal legislatures within the Constitution as it now stands.

The platform was adopted without debate.

ALL-NIGHT SITTING

Philadelphia, June 26.

After an all-night sitting, the Rules Committee of the Democratic National Convention decided, by 36 votes to 12, to abolish the rule that a majority of two-thirds of the delegates is necessary to nominate Presidential candidates, but in order to pacify the opposition, it is prepared to recommend a re-apportionment of delegates for future Conventions.

The Platform Committee also broke up at dawn after a night's deliberation on the Party's election programme.

Members are pledged to strict secrecy pending President Roosevelt's approval of their efforts. It is reported that the chief problem is the wages and hours plank. Party leaders want a pledge which will satisfy Liberals and Labour, without specifically committing the Party to the hazards of a campaign to amend the Constitution so as to enable Federal or State Governments to enforce laws regulating maximum hours and minimum wages.

Governor Landon, the Republican candidate, has already pledged himself to support a constitutional amendment giving the States the right to make such legislation.

WOODEN SPOONISTS TO CLASH

Champions To Be Tested

INDIANS SHOULD DO WELL

(BY "SHORT HEAD")

The Senior Lawn Bowls League Champions will be given a stiff test to-day by the K.C.C. in their return encounter at home, and much will depend on how the homesters fare.

Last week's results were very much expected, with the exception of the Indians' first away win in two seasons. The Indians on the whole played good bowls and thoroughly deserved to win.

Two potential challengers to the senior Champions—the Kowloon Bowling Green and Recreation Club—had a very evenly fought out game on Saturday last, when the Bowling Green showed their superiority over the Portuguese lads by a margin of nine shots. Although winning on all three rinks, the margin of deficit was only a few shots. In every one of the three games played, the respective skips were seen to the good, especially in the game between R. Duncan's four and Alves' quartette. By this victory the Bowling Green are on level terms with the Recreation, both teams having 12 points to their credit with eight games played.

The C.C.C. "A" did not have matters all their way in their match against their "B" team, and but for the display given by W. Gill's four, the "A" would have been sorely put to avoid defeat. Gill's rink lost to Luz's four by no less than 13 shots. On the other hand W. K. Way's rink after more than holding their own against U. M. Omar and his men fell away badly and allowed them to win by three shots. At one stage of the game U. M. Omar's rink had to go all out to avoid defeat, and the losers had kept their heads and not running wild as they did. Victory would certainly have been theirs. In the third game Roselle's four had the advantage over Basa and his men, winning by five shots. The winners were playing slightly the better bowls and were full value for the victory.

FIRST AWAY WIN

The Indians scored their first away win in two seasons when they beat the Talkoo Docks by 26 shots. It was a no mean feat although the Dockers were not playing the same brand of bowls of a year or two ago. Dallah returned to his old form and his rink was victorious by 13 shots over Wallace's four, while A. R. Minu, who is at the present moment playing consistently good bowls also scored 13 shots to the good over Drummond's four. Adal's rinks and Chalmers' four battled to a standstill at 17 shots all.

Yet another defeat greeted the Kowloon Dockers when they played the Police Recreation Club away on Saturday. "Jock" McKelvie's rink was the only quartette to win—and their eighth victory over Shepherd's four was a praiseworthy one. J. V. Ramsay's rink was beaten by Mair's quartette to the tune of 21 shots to 12 while W. E. Hollands' four had the better of the argument over Cooper's four by 23 shots to 12.

K.C.C.'S GOOD DISPLAY

The K.C.C. did very well to win against the C.S.C.C. at Happy Valley. Some very fine bowling was witnessed and Kowloon fully deserved their victory. Bebbington, newly appointed skip in Phillips' place, did very well to beat Hollidge's rink by nine shots. He bowled extremely well and was ably backed up by Overy playing at number one from the second team. For the Civil Service's rink Gellately and Hollidge were the outstanding players. Rakusen was off form. On the next rink Fraser got the better of McGowan by seven shots. All four in Fraser's rink played well, particularly Kern who plays seldom and was brought in in place of Geall.

Major of Civil Service played badly but Collyer and McGowan bowled excellently and but for them the defeat would have been much heavier. Hyde Lay had a rare tussle with Jones and it was anybody's game up to the last head when Jones pushed the Kowloon shot through to lay four and win by one shot. It was a magnificent shot as Jones had to make a very small pot to draw on to the wood.

Lay played beautiful bowls and during the afternoon saved counts of 8, 6 and 5. He was given good support by Lee and Phillips. Jones also played a sterling game and it was due to him and Strange that they did not lose. Knight playing lead was badly off.

TO-DAY'S GAMES

Bowling Green Must Win

The Indians are providing the opposition for the Kowloon Bowling Green to-day. Their past form has awakened the hopes in the breast of their followers that they may yet upset the "apple-cart" against the "giant" of the Kowloon side. At present, the Indians are playing well together. Their changes in the team, although coming late, have done a great deal of good, and it appears to me that they have at last found the right combination.

Three of their skips, A. R. Dallah, A. R. Minu and M. Y. Adal are all playing well at present, especially Minu, who has been showing consistently good form. The Bowling Green although possessing such stalwarts as L. Guy, R. Duncan and A. M. Holland will be sorely put to the test, especially playing away.

This game should prove to be an interesting affair, and though the Indians will be playing with more confidence than usual, because of playing at home, will find the Bowling Green a hard nut to crack. The odds should favour the Kowloon team.

Club de Recreio will be crossing the bay to meet the Civil Servants. With the exception of F. J. Jones's rink the Civil Servants are a weak lot, and I doubt whether any real opposition will be forthcoming. Recreation's players are all playing consistent bowls these days. They should be able to account for the Civil Servants and ought to gather both points.

CHAMPIONS' STIFF TASK

Strong opposition will be provided by the K.C.C. when they meet the C.C.C. "A" away to-day. The Valley team are making several changes. Arculli is on the sick list, and Roselle has been brought up from the "B" team to play No. 3 to Luz. On the other hand Souza has been transferred to the "B" team.

Fraser will be unable to skip for the K.C.C. and his place has been delegated to E. C. Fincher. The Mainland team have two other trustworthy skips in the persons of A. Hyde Lay and N. J. Bebbington. Backed up by the all round competency of the personnel the K.C.C. should be able to give the Champions a fight for the points.

The Champions are not playing so very impressive bowls lately. Invariably their victory rested with one rink or other. There is no denying the fact that the whole team, besides being unreliable, lacks confidence. It will not come as a surprise to me then to see them going down for the first time this season.

An interesting game should be witnessed on the Police R.C. green when the home team entertains their neighbour the C.C.C. "B." I think the records of the Guardians of the law are more impressive than the C.C.C. "B's" and with Mair and W. E. Hollands playing as well as ever the Police should start favourite.

Field returns to the C.C.C. "B's" fold. This should be definitely an acquisition. Way's rink is about the weakest of the three and with Gill and his men deteriorating I do not think the Police will be given much opposition.

Two "Dock" teams—the Kowloon Dockers and the Talkoo Docks—both at the bottom of the League table will be battling out for the "wooden spoonist" honours to-day. The Talkoo Docks have played five games without a single point. The Kowloon Dockers are in a no better position, having played seven games without a single victory to their credit. Their clash to-day will provide the answer. I think the teams are well matched and the result will be a very open one.

LAWN BOWLS

Close Open Pairs Contest

A spirited, yet unavailing effort marked the termination of a close Open Pairs games yesterday at the K.C.C. green between J. S. Landolt and R. Rumjahn and Coleman and G. N. Mitchell. The latter lost by 2 shots, 22-20, after trailing 20-5 at the 10th head.

Rumjahn and his partner commenced well registering four threes in quick succession and soon had a commanding lead of 15 shots. From the 10th head onwards, Mitchell and his partner asserted themselves, registering two threes and a two. At the final head they required a four to tie and were lying two shots. Mitchell attempted to drive to save the situation but failed.

The losers' best head was the 4th where they obtained a four.

SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP

A decisive defeat was inflicted by W. K. Way on T. Robson when they met in their Open Singles Bowls Championship game at the Police Club yesterday. Way running out the winner by the score of 21 shots to 5.

It was definitely an "off" day for Robson who, at the 13th head had only scored two shots. Way took the lead from the start and never at any time was he in the slightest danger of losing it.

SOUTH WEST PUTS ITS CASE

Leaders Explain Movement To Hong Kong Press

CIVIL WAR IS NOT AIM

A denial that the recent activities of the Kwangtung and Kwangsi armies were for the purpose of civil war was made by a delegation of South-Western leaders which yesterday granted an interview to the Hong Kong press to give their side of the question. The sole motive behind the movement, it declared, was to lead China to resist foreign aggression.

Members of the delegation were Dr. Kan Chia-hou, Inspector General of the Foreign Office for the two Kwangs, Mr. Huang Lin-shu, Commissioner of Education in Kwangtung, Lieut. Gen. Chang Yin-ming of the Fourth Route Army in Kwangsi, Major Gen. Li Hoh-lin, of the First Route Army, Kwangtung, and Mr. Chiu-Sam Tsang, Mr. Huang's assistant.

RESISTANCE MOVE

Dr. Kan said:—

I consider this gathering a significant occasion as this is probably the first time that the political and military representatives of the two Kwangs have met the newspaper representatives of South China in the interests of truth and the recognition of public opinion, which is so powerful that it may lead China out of the present crisis.

The resistance to foreign aggression has become a unanimous and tremendous demand of the Chinese people. Whichever side raises the standard of resistance it does so only to accede to the demand and the wish of the people of China. As to why this movement started in the South-west, and as to why it started at this moment, my colleague Mr. Huang Lin-shu will give you a full explanation later.

It is deplorable that this patriotic movement, anxiously awaited during the last five years, should have been questioned when it has become a reality, as to the sincerity of its promoters. We invite you therefore to make an inspection trip to Kwangsi and Kwangtung to see and hear for yourselves. There you will find out whether this movement has any foreign complications or whether it has been made against any one particular person.

TELEGRAM TO NANKING

You have all seen to-day a telegram sent out by the South-West political council of the South-West Executive Committee of the Kuo Min Tang Central Council announcing five definite points which represent the fundamental policy of the leaders of the South-West. When they have urged the second plenary session of the Central Council to debate these measures, they themselves are bound by duty to carry them out as long as they are in power.

It seems to me that this point alone will be sufficient to dispense any doubts as regards the motive of initiating the movement.

It is equally regrettable that rumours of war and the clash of arms have been freely circulated. It was reported on Thursday's and yesterday's papers that Kwangsi troops attacked Hengchow. The fact is that all the Kwangtung and Kwangsi troops have been withdrawn within their own borders and there is not a single man in Hunan territory. Lieut. Gen. Chang Yin-ming will tell you the exact military situation.

WASTE NO SHOTS

In the face of foreign aggression it is obvious that the strength of the national army should be preserved without a single shot being wasted on internal strife. But fabrications continue to emanate from various quarters and give false impressions that Kwangtung and Kwangsi are seeking to precipitate a civil war.

It seems inconceivable to us that in the face of foreign aggression there should be a civil war in China. If there is any time when the Chinese people really needed to be united it is the present moment. Resistance to foreign aggression is a national issue and should lead logically to national unity instead of internal dissension. You cannot do otherwise when the whole country is moving towards the same aim and struggling against a common foe. We know very well that Germany, Italy and more recently Turkey were all unified over resistance to foreign aggression or when fighting a foreign enemy.

We appeal to you to-day as guardians of public opinion to use your influence to bring back China to unification.

I come to you to-day, to the leaders of public opinion to request you to do all you can to prevent the disastrous consequences of civil war at a time when the unity of the country is essential.

SOUTH'S REASONS

Mr. Huang Lin-shu said:—

I want to make clear why the South has started a programme of armed resistance to external aggression. The movement has been started chiefly because foreign troops in North China have been increased in violation of a treaty and there is no necessity to increase them to such a number.

We have been expecting that North China would lead us against external aggression but now we realise that we must start the movement ourselves.

The fifth national congress of the Kuo Min Tang was held for the purpose of uniting the whole country. Two things were submitted to the northern representatives—acceptance of the south-west's policy of resistance and withdrawal of the north's traditional policy of non-aggression. The northern representative readily accepted these two points.

After taking part in two meetings I was disappointed at the policy of resistance. The northern Government has still failed to lead the people so we have started the movement in the south.

We hope that you will help us in leading China out of her present crisis. We are expecting the northern government to accept our proposals and we are sure of success.

TROOPS WITHDRAWN

Lieut. Gen. Chang Yin-ming, said:—

As I am a soldier I shall report to you the military conditions along the borders. As people are not clear about the exact situation rumours are freely circulated and false news disseminated that much damage has been done to the south-west and China. There is much misunderstanding in China and abroad.

The movement of troops in Kwangtung and Kwangsi have been directed solely against foreign aggression and there is no other motive. Further, the army commanders in their first telegram to the north, requested the Central Government to lead them. Army commanders have frequently disobeyed the Central Government's orders to cease their resistance and it is clear that the Central Government alone does not want resistance.

We have started the movement and we hope that we shall move the whole country on the same course. To our great surprise Nanking has sent a great number of troops southwards to bring pressure to bear on us. In order to avoid clashes and civil war all the Kwangsi and Kwangtung troops have been withdrawn to their own borders. They were ordered to do so on June 12 and the movement was completed on June 15. I can make this very responsible statement as I am Chief of Staff of the Kwangsi Army.

CHINA'S AQUATIC STARS LEAVE TO-MORROW

(By "THE EEL")

Miss Yeung Sau King and Mr. Chan Chan Hing, China's aquatic stars for the World Olympics in Berlin, sail to-morrow for Europe on the Conte Verde. No one can doubt as to the justification of choice and these two unofficial ambassadors of goodwill and friendship sail with the best wishes of all China.

Yeung Sau King, Chinese Olympic Star

Miss Yeung returns to-day from Shanghai, where she performed the opening ceremony of a new swimming pool. One of China's sporting idols she is popularly welcomed anywhere. After the Sports in Berlin, Miss Yeung will possibly return via the United States where she is greatly admired for her swimming ability.

It will come as an agreeable and undoubted surprise to either Miss Yeung or Chan if they are in the fore at the conclusion of the Sports, but the Olympic Games are not those which any nation enters only on the expectations of winning; they are competed for in true sporting rivalry with the sole aim of consolidating friendship. Though it would be innocuous to quote comparative figures, it would not be too venturesome to predict that Miss Yeung will not be beaten by huge margins. One thing is certain, and that is, her style of swimming, graceful and easy, will not be outshone by her rivals.

It came as a surprise that Kwok Chun Hang was omitted from the team (I suppose two can be called a team), but his failure in the trials left the Selectors no other alternative. Kwok covered himself with glory, and reflected much credit on Chinese swimmers when he was in Australia but since his return he fell off badly.

This is the first time in the history of the Olympics that China has sent swimming delegates. Track and tennis stars have gone before, but the sending of a football team and a swimming team, small as it may be, are innovations and fortunate are recipients of the honour.

The potential champions of the Olympic Aquatics, the American competitors, Misses Mary Lou Doris Buckley, Olive McKean and Betty Lea, all come from Wisconsin and have been coached by the expert and famous Mr. Ray Daugherty.

Mrs. Yeung Chu-nam, Miss Yeung's mother accompanies the team to Europe.

SWIMMING RECORDS BROKEN

New York, June 26.

Mrs. Lenore Knight Wingard beat her own world record for one mile freestyle swimming clocking 24 minutes 7-1/5 seconds. The previous record time was 24 minutes 20-2/5 seconds.

In the same race she covered 1500 metres in 22 minutes 39-1/5 seconds, beating Miss Helene Madison's time of 23 minutes 17-1/5 seconds.

NORTH TROOPS ADVANCE

There are rumours that Kwangsi advanced its troops and attacked Hengchow. That report shows either that it was propaganda with malicious intention or utter ignorance.

It is a fact that the Nanking troops are advancing in the direction of Kwangsi and Kwangtung. We have done our best to avoid civil war and we are still hoping that the Central Government will lead us. If, however, there is a clash, it will be within the borders of Kwangtung or Kwangsi. We do not expect that to happen.

Almost all the army commanders are in favour of resistance. Nanking sent the 51st division to the Kwangsi border but the commander disobeyed the order for civil war and declared that the intention of the division was resistance only. Two brigades were sent to the Kwangsi border but they refused to advance. Another brigade in Fukien took the same course. We are confident that in the face of foreign aggression the army commanders and soldiers will not fight in a civil war.

There are 15 divisions now in Hunan advancing towards Kwangsi and Kwangtung, 11 in Shansi, 11 in Kweichow, and eight in Fukien ready to move south.

We know very well that friendly nations in Europe and America do not want to see civil war in China. We request that you give us fair treatment and tell the world the truth.

MONEY REFORMS PROVE SUCCESSFUL

be taken by the Chinese Government. I was examining the situation with a view to the preparation of a detailed programme with adequate safeguards and it is possible with international support. But before any such scheme could be devised, the exchange market became dangerously weak and the Chinese Government decided to adopt an inconvertible managed currency on the basis of their own resources.

"I had no responsibility for this bold step but I have of course closely followed the situation and I have no hesitation in saying that the action taken has been fully justified by the success which it has achieved. It was accepted throughout China without any serious difficulty. The notes of the Government banks have been steadily replacing the silver dollars in circulation. Their exchange value has been firmly maintained and the resources at the disposal of the Government banks for this purpose have substantially increased. The rate of exchange fixed has tended to encourage exports and the resulting increase of agricultural prices should, in due course, lead to an improvement in the purchasing power of the agricultural producers. The adverse balance of trade has been greatly reduced, and it seems probable, so far as can be judged from the statistics available, that international receipts and expenditures of China on income account are now evenly balanced. Thus the fundamental economic conditions for a stable currency are fulfilled.

"I think the Chinese Government are to be congratulated on the progress which their policy has achieved. Already much has been done to re-establish sound financial and economic conditions. Confidence in the currency is growing. But much has still to be done before it can be solidly assured as a basis for long-term trading and investment plans. The currency reform had to be put into force at short notice, and the various measures necessary to make it water-tight have had to be drafted piecemeal and fitted together gradually. The unification of the note issue and the reorganization of the Central Bank as an independent Reserve Bank has not yet been carried through effectively. There have been unfortunate speculative movements of a non-commercial character which have disturbed sentiment. There is a large Budget deficit entailing constant recourse to Government borrowing. The domestic bond market is depressed and Government credit low. Though the money market is now comparatively easy, many of the commercial banks are far from liquid. Meanwhile, both in the Southern provinces and in the North, there have been political difficulties in carrying through the currency reform, as it should be done, on a national basis. Lastly, the sharp fall in the price of silver, following the suspension by the U.S. Treasury of silver purchases on the world market, aroused misgiving. But all things considered there would appear to be every reason, so far as economic factors are concerned, for confidence in the present currency scheme, provided that the Chinese Government complete and carry through efficiently the programme of internal reforms including especially the reorganization of the Central Bank and the reform of the Budget.

FUTURE PROSPECTS

"The prospects of the currency and indeed of the whole financial situation of China for the future will depend first on the maintenance of peace and order in the interior of China, and secondly on a settlement of the special situation in North China. In particular, the Customs revenues are a vital factor in Chinese finance and every effort should be made to put an end to the difficulties in the way of their collection in East Hopei. These difficulties cannot be removed without a better political understanding between China and Japan. During my last visit to Tokyo, I was assured that the Japanese Government desires such an understanding; that it favours the maintenance of the Chinese Customs administration and will give no support to the creation of a special tariff by any local authority in China; and that it has no wish to interfere with the internal administration of China. It is greatly to be hoped that a solution of the present difficulties will be reached which will restore general confidence and security for trade and investment.

"I have dealt at length with the currency position because financial security is the basis of trade. Exchange and contraction of credit are the life of enterprise. The currency reform has laid the foundation for an increase of trade activities. But the export trade could be still further stimulated if the burden of local taxes, import duties and export duties could be reduced and if the standards of production, manufacture and handling could be improved. It rests with the Chinese themselves to promote exports by such means. But I would sound a note of caution in regard to the tendency to create control by monopoly—or anything resembling a monopoly—of the natural exports of China. As regards imports, the immediate prospects may not seem encouraging. But it is no use importing goods that cannot be paid for, and the export trade to China must improve before progress in imports can be looked for. If, however, present tendencies are maintained, there is every reason to expect a gradual and steady improvement in the import trade. I hope that British exporters will take advantage of the turn in the tide when it comes. They must expect to face keen competition; enterprise and expert salesmanship will be required, as well as readiness to take some risks. Needless to say, they must make a careful study of market requirements and establish the closest possible contact with their Chinese customers. Indeed, in every field of business, co-operation with Chinese interests should be aimed at. The establishment of the Sino-British Trade Councils in Shanghai and Hankow will, I hope, help in this direction.

"Imports, of course, are largely affected by the tariff, and I hope that the Chinese Government will consider whether the present tariff cannot be revised in a downward direction so far as this is possible without reducing revenue. During recent years a number of the tariff rates have been pushed up to a point at which they produce no revenue and merely prohibit legitimate trade. These rates require to be reconsidered in the light of the present exchange position. Industrial interests will no doubt press strongly for the maintenance of the highest possible protective tariff, but the advantages they obtain will be at the expense of the agricultural population. It is the duty of the Government to strike a fair balance between the interests of industry and of agriculture, but I believe that in China the restoration of rural economy should have first consideration. In my opinion, therefore, a downward revision of the present tariff would be advantageous to China both in its financial and in its economic effects. The Maritime Customs' credit and it is in the first interests of China, both to maintain that service, in all its traditional efficiency and to adjust the tariff so as to secure the maximum revenue.

DARDANELLES PROBLEM

Temporary Break In Discussions

Montreux, June 25.
The general discussion of the problem of Dardanelles re-fortification by Turkey and the rights of power to send warships to and from the Black Sea having been concluded, the conference of nations here adjourned until after the meetings of the Council and Assembly of the League of Nations.

The immediate remilitarisation of the Straits, as soon as the new convention has been signed, has been tentatively agreed upon. This will be done by special protocol, which will not only authorise remilitarisation of the Dardanelles demilitarised zones, but the application of the protocol's Article IX, whereby Turkey can subject any warship passing through the Straits to special conditions, if she considers the passage a menace of war.

TURKEY'S SAFEGUARDS

(Hong Kong Daily Press' Special)

Montreux, June 25.
In Thursday's session of the Straits Conference the first reading of the Turkish Draft was completed. The discussion was tuned chiefly on Article IX which gives Turkey the right to make the passage of warships through the Dardanelles dependent upon special permission, if she considers herself to be in danger of war.

SOVIET STATEMENT

"In order," as he points out, "to correct a false interpretation given by some papers to the Soviet Union aims," Litvinoff issued a statement to the press emphasising that all the Soviet Union wants is a limitation of the tonnage through the Straits of warships of non-Black Sea States, and does not compel them to increase their own strength in the Black Sea. At the same time Russia protests against the limitation of tonnage of the States belonging to the Black Sea, a limitation which does not exist at present according to the Lausanne Treaty. The Soviet Union demands free passage for her warships in the various seas, nothing more. The Soviet Delegation also stands for a free passage of warships through the Straits of all nations, in the event of it being necessary of coming to the assistance of a victim of an aggression in carrying out the provisions of the League Covenant.

SMART MAN!

he uses Anzora

A very smart idea! For a little Anzora used on the hair in the morning will keep it tidy until bedtime. And a neat appearance is an asset, socially or in business. There is no other hair fixative as good as Anzora—for more than thirty years it has been supreme. And it suits every head. Anzora Cream for greasy scalps, Anzora Violets for dry scalps and Anzora Brillantine if you prefer glossiness.
